

Cupid's Trappan: or, Up the Green Forrest:

243

OR, THE SCORNER Scorn'd: or, WILLOW turn'd into CARNATION.

Described in the Ranting RESOLUTION of a Forsaken MAID.

To a pleasant new Tune, now all in Fashion, &c.

Once did I love a bonny-bonny Bird,
Thinking that he had been my own :
But he lov'd another far better than I,
And he has taken his flight and is flown, brave Boys,
And he has taken his flight and is flown.

Up the green forest, and down the green forest,
Like one much distressed in mind,
I hoope and I hoope, and I hung up my hood,
But my bonny Bird I could not find, brave Boys,
But my bonny Bird, &c.

But she that hath gotten my bonny-bonny Bird,
Would the Devil had had her for me ;
It was not a crown nor a noble so round,
That should have bought my bonny Bird from me,
That should have, &c. [brave Boys]

He set me upon his dissembling knee,
And looked me all in the face,
He gave unto me an Judas-kiss,
But his heart was in another place, brave Boys,
But his heart, &c.

She that hath gotten my bonny-bonny Bird,
Is her make as much on't as she can ;
Say we ever I have him, or I have him not,
I will quaff with him up and then, brave Boys,
I will quaff, &c.

He told me he lov'd me far better than all
The richest temptations i' th' World,
Then treasure or money, he call'd me his Honey,
But now from his heart I am huri'd, brave Boys,
But now, &c.

He could no' endure to be out of my sight,
He lov'd me like silver or gold,
His blood was on fire, with the flames of desire,
But I find his hot love was soon cold, brave Boys,
But I find, &c.

His tongue was so tipr with temptations, that I could have suffer'd him (without controul)
To have done what he would, and have humor'd his blood,
Had the venture been body and soul, brave Boys,
Had the venture, &c.

And now he requites me with scorn and disdain,
Some other hath gotten him from me,
But let her take heed, as last how she speed,
Least a third do prove better then she, brave Boys,
Least a third, &c.

The Man for one Maid, the Creator hath made,
He that hath more, hath more then his due ;
Sure two is too many, he'll never love any,
For twenty Maids will be too few, brave Boys,
For twenty, &c.

Those Virgins that take him, I think are stark mad,
For he that proves false unto one,
That lov'd him as life, will be false to his wife,
I have cause to be glad that he's gone, brave Boys,
I have cause, &c.

The witcherast of love, is enough to undo
The hearts of poor credulous Creatures,
For freedom to me, is far sweetter than he,
For freedom is softer then fetters, brave Boys,
For freedom is, &c.

If he had contum'd he might a bad all,
His carriage and wit was so brave,
Although he had like to have given me a falsh,
Yet the jewel of jewelz I have, brave Boys,
Yet the jewel, &c.

Whitch still I will keep from such Gamesters as he,
Up such I will ne'r be betray'd ;
My portion shall be, my virginity,
Tis downy enough for a Maid, brave Boys,
Tis downy, &c.

I'll stagger and rant, and I'll ne'r think upon,
But bring willow garlands in fashion ;
Although for my part, my own merry heart,
Shall turn willow into carnation, brave Boys,
Shall turn, &c.

I vow to be jolly, brisk, bonny and free,
And march under Challey's banners ;
I'll sing, and I'll dance, and my spirits advance,
In spight of all Cupid's Trappaners, brave Boys,
In spight, &c.

When he comes disfigur'd and crapp'd from war,
I'll jeer him, and laugh him to scorn ;
His wife too will scoff, when he comes lamey off,
And give him a night-cap of horn, brave Boys,
And give, &c.

All you that are Virgins, and live at your will,
Be wise and take warning by me ;
Be'revente your hearts, to a tongue and good parts,
If the Man have no fidelity, brave Boys,
If the Man, &c.

It is better to live in a Virgin's degree,
Then marry a false-hearted Date ;
Their cunning shall ne'r, take me in their snare,
The Devil shall catch him for Date, brave Boys,
The Devil shall catch him for Date, brave Boys.

L O N D O N : Printed by and for W. Orme, for A. Milbourn ; and are to be sold by J. Dearon, at the Angel in Gilt-spur-street, without New-gate.